Strategies at home

- Confidence is the key to learning and test taking. Test taking is a stressful experience for most children, especially those who don't feel confident about the material they are being tested on. Explain to your child that test preparedness occurs in the weeks and days before the test and not the night before.
- Take their time to carefully read all directions. Many kids lose valuable test score points because they simply do not follow directions. Take your time and follow the test directions.

- Arrive early for school. There is nothing more stressful than arriving late for a test. We recommend showing up at least 15 minutes earlier than usual to avoid worrying about being late.
- Eat breakfast in the morning! This will give you an extra boost of energy.
- Wear comfortable clothing. Do not wear your tightest pants, that will make you uncomfortable. You will have to stay seated for a few hours, and the last thing you want to worry about is your clothing.
- Relax and take a deep breath.
